ROLE OF SARDAR PATEL IN POLITICAL INTEGRATION

BIOGRAPHY:

Sardar Vallabh Bhai Patel "Iron Man of India" was born on 31st October 1875, in a small village in Nadiad. His father Jhaverbhai Patel was a simple farmer and mother Laad Bai was a simple lady. From his childhood itself, Patel was a very hardworking individual.

Political Integration:

At the time of Indian Independence in 1947, India was divided into two sets of territories, the first time or the first being the territories over which the Crown has suzerainty but which were under the control of their hereditary rulers. In addition, there were small several colonial enclaves controlled by France and Portugal. The political integration of these territories into India was a declared objective of the Indian National Congress, which the Government of India pursued over the next decade. Through a combination of factors, Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel and V.P Menon convinced the rulers of the various princely states to join India.

Reason for Integration:

The termination of paramountcy would have in principle meant that all rights that flowed from the states relationship with the British crown would return to them, leaving them free to negotiate relationships with the new states of India and Pakistan "On a basis of complete freedom". Early British plans for the transfer of power such as Cripps Mission, recognised the possibility that some princely states might choose to stand out of Independent India. This was unacceptable to the Indian National Congress which regarded this scheme as a Balkanisation of India.

Before India achieved independence, India had around 565 princely states and the Congress had a big challenge of persuading them for peaceful merger with India. Congress party entrusted Sardar Patel with this responsibility and Patel took it as a challenge of life and successfully executed it.

Sardar Patel as Minister for Home and States Affairs had the responsibility of welding the British Indian Provinces and the princely states into a United India. Sardar Patel took charge of the state's department in July 1947. He sensed the urgent and imperative need of the integration of princely states. He followed an iron-handed policy. He made it clear that he did not recognize the right of any state to remain independent and in isolation within India.

Patel also appealed to patriotic and national sentiments of the princes and invited them to join the forming of a democratic constitution in national interest. He persuaded them to surrender defence, foreign affairs and communication to the government of India. By August 15, 1947 all except Hyderabad, Junagarh and Kashmir had accessed to India. He therefore carried a threefold process of assimilation, centralization and unification of states. The states were amalgamated to form a union and that union was merged with the union of India.

He handled the Junagarh and Hyderabad Crisis as a seasoned statesman. Nawab of Junagarh wanted to accede to Pakistan when the people revolted, Patel intervened. Indian government took over the administration. Patel merged it with India by holding a plebiscite.

Patel with an iron-fisted hand subdued the Nizam when the Nizam boasted anti-India feelings and let loose a blood bath by the Razakaris. He ordered the army to march into Hyderabad. The Nizam surrendered and Hyderabad was acceded to India.

Thus, Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel ensured by his calculated methods, the absorption of a multitude of princely states into the Indian Union. Without a Civil War, he secured the solidarity of the nation.

The spectacular success of Sardar Patel in unifying around 565 princely states of India made him the natural claimant for the title of "Iron Man". He delivered what was expected from him under hostile conditions and it was a testimony to his steel-like determination and rock-like courage.
